

I was born into this synagogue when my parents joined the congregation in 1948. Sixty-six years ago, I thought this synagogue was a special place. Now, I know it is. Except for the time when I was actively serving in the United States Army and attending college pursuing a Bachelor of Arts degree, it has been my spiritual home, in which I have been enthusiastically involved for over 20 years.

Our synagogue is a family-friendly, traditional conservative synagogue which respects and incorporates traditional values. We guide each of our members toward a distinct, positive Jewish identity through worship, life-long education, enrichment, and community involvement. It is a home in which every member matters and may this synagogue be for you, the haven it has been for me.
